The first Indian the Pilgrims saw (after 3 months) strolled right into Plymouth.

He spoke English.

His name was SAMOSSET. The Pilgrims gave him - strong water, biscuits, butter, cheese, pudding & a piece of duck meat. Samoset was an ALGONKIAN Indian chief from (now Maine). He had come to this area with an English explorer just a few months before the Pilgrims arrived.

He acted as interpreter. He told them of the PATUXET Indians (used to live where Plymouth was); strange illness killed the Indians; most of the New England Indians.

SA MOSET came back a few days later with 5 hungry Indian friends.

One of them was TISCOVANTUM (SQUANTO)

He spoke good English

Winter 1620/1621

Many Pilgrims got sick; more than half of them died. Some probably had scurvy (no Vitamin C). Some may have caught pneumonia or typhus (from lice).

They buried their dead at night. There were so few left, they feared the Indians would find out & attack them.

Samuel Fuller acted as a doctor.
they tried to use herbs from their gardens.

They thought it was dangerous to wash their bodies

But a new and bountiful crop had been harvested. Food was abundant was to stay by them until his death
